Recent Employment History

2026 | Web Developer | House 337

- Part of an uplift team of developers on a fixed contract facilitating the launch of a product for a client company (one of the top 5 American tech companies) as part of a confidential workshop.
- Collaborated with QA validators, translators, project managers and other developers to localise multiple web pages for different countries across Europe, fixing copy and layout issues that arose when translating the web pages' contents into numerous different languages, and paying close attention to each country's product availability and orthographical standards.
- Quickly and efficiently responding to requests to edit the code, using HTML and CSS according to company guidelines and standards to make web pages adaptive and attractive across all browser viewport sizes on desktop and mobile, making use of custom classes and media queries.
- Utilised an SVN version control system using both company-specific custom commands as well as standard ones.

2022–2024 | English Language Assistant | British Council

- Two nine-month-long internships as a language assistant, teaching English as a second language to German school students first in Munich and then in Hamburg.
- Interacting bilingually with students of various ages and national backgrounds, including those who were fluent in neither German nor English, and relating new grammatical concepts to those they were already familiar with.
- Creating and delivering presentations to different classes on topics that fell within the students' interests and language ability while still introducing new ideas and vocabulary
- Leading group discussions and encouraging students to build arguments on their own.
- Flexibly adapting to various teachers' needs including preparing warm-ups, aiding in school trips, mediating between the German school and school groups from Spain and Italy, and delivering revision sessions for A-Level students who were studying the UK.
